Abstract — The increase of refugee status claiming immigrants in Canada has led to a review of the immigration policy concerning this group. This report looks at the weaknesses of current legislation which is linked to the Geneva Convention and its Protocol, studying Canada's past adherence to the rights afforded under its protection. Also discusses public and government opinion on support for a humanitarian and generous refugee policy and questions of balancing efficiency with procedural fairness to claimants. Gives a chronology of events since 1969.

Résumé — Le processus de reconnaissance du statut de réfugié au sens de la Convention de Genève, tel qu'il est énoncé dans la Loi sur l'immigration, sert à déterminer si les personnes qui revendiquent ce statut y ont effectivement droit et peuvent bénéficier de la protection accordée aux réfugiés au sens de la Convention. Ce processus s'est avéré inadéquat, tant au point de vue juridique que pratique. Dans ce bulletin, on examine les mécanismes en vigueur actuellement et le projet de réforme contenu dans la loi C-55 déposé en mai 1987.

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Canadian Research Index puts all of Canada's hard-to-find government and research literature at your fingertips. This monthly indexing, abstracting and document delivery service covers all levels of government in Canada, as well as institutions receiving research grants. Most titles included in Microlog are available in either paper or microfiche format. Combined with a microfiche collection, the Microlog Service is a powerful tool for finding Canadian report publications. The unique Microlog Accession Number is the key to immediate retrieval of any document.

SCOPE

Among other documents, Microlog includes research papers in physical, natural and social sciences, policy papers, important statistics, and annual reports. Every effort is made to ensure the currency of the index. For instance, documents appearing in the Checklist of Canadian Government Publications are delivered by Microlog approximately two months after publication of the list.

LANGUAGE POLICY

Documents issued in English or French are indexed and abstracted in the language of publication, while bilingual documents are indexed and abstracted in both languages.

SOURCES AND COVERAGE

Federal Documents: The Microlog editors review all checklists issued by the Canadian Government Publishing Centre and order every document relevant to the service. Except for serials, maps, pamphlets, and manuals, all monographs covered by the Federal Depository Plan are included in the index. Also, a special effort is made to track down elusive but important titles which do not appear in the lists.

Microlog offers a special collection of documents published by the Federal Government but not issued through the Federal Depository Plan. These titles, available to subscribers as the Non-Depository Publications collection, are indicated in the Titles section by a bullet (•). Microlog is also the direct distributing agent for many government bodies.

Provincial Documents: Depository arrangements with several provincial libraries have been established to ensure that Microlog subscribers receive all publications from those provinces. Where no depository arrangement exists, all publications lists issued by the province are reviewed for acquisitions.

Municipal Documents: Since these titles are very difficult to obtain, the Microlog editors make special efforts to include publications from municipal sources.

ACCESS

The Index provides access by subject, corporate or individual author, and series title.

The full Microlog file from 1979 to date, consisting of almost 50,000 records, is available online through Can/OLE. This is an ideal way to locate hard-to-find reports which may then be ordered directly online through the Can/DOCS service. Contact: Can/OLE Client Services, CISTI, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0S2.

FEATURES

Microlog comprises the following sections:

1. Titles and abstracts: A full bibliographic citation and a descriptive abstract for each title.
2. Name Index: Access by personal author, corporate author, and conference name.
3. Series Titles: Lists by title and number all reports in series in the service; series are available as an ongoing subscription or retrospective collection.
4. Subject Index: Descriptors based on Library of Congress and Canadiana Subject Headings are assigned to each document. A cross-referencing structure assists searchers.
5. Microfiche collections: Lists contents of each fiche collection for quick reference. These collections can be used as current awareness lists in broad subject areas to notify users of new acquisitions. This section is included in the annual cumulation as a separate fiched product.

MICROLOG AND CANADIAN STATISTICS INDEX

Statistical Material: The Canadian Statistics Index (CSI) provides further access to statistical material contained in Microlog monographs and special or annual reports. The CSI identification number has been included with the Microlog citation for the convenience of subscribers to the CSI fiche collection.

Annual Reports: Storage of annual reports in a single sequence has been a problem for clients in the past. The CSI numbers for annual reports are now listed in the bibliographic citation and appear on the microfiche header of each report, to make such sequencing possible.

DOCUMENT DELIVERY

Institutions may subscribe to complete or partial collections of the documents in Microlog. Individual copies on microfiche or paper reprint may be ordered through Micromedia's Document Delivery Service. To order, please contact:

INTRODUCTION

Microlog: Index de recherche du Canada met à votre disposition toutes les publications du gouvernement et les travaux de recherche difficiles à se procurer. Combiné aux collections sur microfiches, le service Microlog constitue un outil très efficace pour retrouver les publications des différents gouvernements du Canada, ainsi que celles des organismes qui reçoivent des subventions pour la recherche. Microlog est aussi un service de livraison de documents, sur microfiches ou sous forme imprimée.

CONTENU

Microlog contient entre autres des recherches en sciences physiques, naturelles et sociales, des énoncés de politique, des statistiques et des rapports annuels. Par l'intermédiaire du service Microlog, on peut obtenir les documents qui figurent sur la Liste des publications du gouvernement du Canada environ deux mois après leur parution sur cette liste.

POLITIQUE LINGUISTIQUE

Les ouvrages publiés en français ou en anglais sont indexés et résumés dans la langue de publication; les ouvrages bilingues sont traités dans les deux langues.

SOURCES

Publications fédérales: Les rédacteurs de Microlog examinent les listes émises par le Centre d'édition du gouvernement du Canada et commandent les documents pertinents. En dehors des publications en série, cartes, brochures et manuels, toutes les monographies régies par le Programme de dépôt du gouvernement fédéral figurent dans l'index, ainsi que des ouvrages importants ne figurant pas sur les listes.

Microlog propose aussi une collection spéciale de publications fédérales non déposées, identifiées par un point (●) dans la section Titres et résumés. Microlog est aussi l'agent de diffusion de nombreux organismes gouvernementaux.

Publications provinciales: Des ententes de dépôt ont été conclues avec plusieurs bibliothèques provinciales pour que les abonnés de Microlog reçoivent toutes les publications de ces provinces. Lorsqu'aucune entente n'existe, les listes de publications émises par les provinces sont examinées afin d'acquiescer les documents.

Publications municipales: Ces ouvrages étant difficiles à se procurer, les rédacteurs de Microlog redoublent d'ardeur pour les inclure dans l'index.

ACCÈS

L'index imprimé est bilingue et les publications sont répertoriées par sujet, par auteur (collectivité et personne physique) et par titre de collection.

Le fichier complet de Microlog, de 1979 à aujourd'hui, contient près de 50,000 notices et est accessible sur

Can/OLE. Il s'agit d'un moyen idéal pour mettre la main sur des rapports difficiles à trouver qu'on peut commander par l'intermédiaire du service Can/DOCS. À ce propos, veuillez vous adresser au Service à la clientèle Can/OLE, ICIST, Ottawa (Ontario), K1A 0S2.

ORGANISATION DE L'INDEX

Microlog est divisé en cinq sections:

1. Titres et résumés: tous les titres sont catalogués et accompagnés d'un résumé descriptif.
2. Index des noms: donne un accès par auteur, collectivité-auteur et titre de conférence.
3. Titres de collections: tous les rapports publiés en série sont classés par titre et numéro. Ces collections peuvent être commandées individuellement.
4. Index des matières: les descripteurs permettent de trouver facilement les publications pertinentes; un réseau de renvois facilite la recherche.
5. Collections de microfiches: chaque collection apparaît dans une section séparée pour faciliter la recherche. Ces listes peuvent aussi servir à renseigner les usagers sur les nouveautés. Dans la refonte, cette section est insérée sous forme de microfiches.

MICROLOG ET L'INDEX DES STATISTIQUES DU CANADA

Données statistiques: L'Index des statistiques du Canada (CSI) constitue une autre source de référence sur les statistiques contenues dans certaines publications indexées dans Microlog. Celles-ci ont un numéro d'ordre spécial qui est inclus dans la référence bibliographique.

Rapports annuels: Afin de rendre le classement des rapports annuels plus facile, le numéro d'ordre CSI correspondant à ces documents figure maintenant dans les références bibliographiques et est inscrit sur les en-têtes de microfiches.

LIVRAISON DE DOCUMENTS

On peut s'abonner à l'ensemble ou à certaines des collections de documents de Microlog. On peut également commander des reproductions de documents sur microfiches ou sur papier par l'intermédiaire du service de livraison de documents de Micromedia. Pour commander, communiquer avec:

Sample CRI Search

"How can a person from a foreign country qualify for refugee status in Canada?"

The researcher can search in CRI as in any library catalogue - by subject, author and title.
Because the index is bilingual, searching can be done in English or in French.

Recherche type avec IRC

"Comment une personne d'un pays étranger peut-elle demander le statut de réfugié au Canada?"

La méthode de recherche dans IRC est la même que dans une bibliothèque, puisque les documents sont indexés par auteur, par sujet et par titre. L'index étant bilingue, la consultation peut se faire en français ou en anglais.

Retrieve the publication

Each bibliographic citation gives a full description of the relevant document. Locate the document by the microfiche number in the library's collection or order from Micromedia. Individual publications are available for purchase on microfiche or paper. The bibliographic description provides publisher source information.

Repérer la publication

Chaque notice bibliographique comprend une description complète du document; celui-ci peut être repéré grâce au numéro de microfiche de la bibliothèque; sinon, il faut le commander à Micromedia. On peut se procurer les monographies sur microfiches ou sur papier. La description bibliographique comporte également des indications sur l'éditeur.

Nanaimo, B.C. : Dept. of Fisheries and Oceans, Fisheries Branch, South Coast Division, 1993. vi, 34 p. : maps. Bibliogr. (Canadian manuscript report of fisheries and aquatic sciences ; no. 2195) ISSN 0706-6473
MICROLOG 94-00039 1 fiche

The status of odd year pink and sockeye salmon originating from the Johnstone-Georgia Strait study area has been reported biennially since 1963. The reports provide a review of catch and escapement data, proposed fishing patterns, and major regulatory decisions that govern the fisheries in the study area. This report details the strategies and decisions used to manage the Johnstone Strait commercial salmon net fisheries, including information on catches of the study area stocks and of those stocks intercepted in the study area en route to their natal streams.

This treatise applies the concepts and methodologies of the United States Forest Service's Visual Management System to a select study area within the Upper Yoho Valley in Yoho National Park, British Columbia. This system provides the framework within which criteria can be established for the identification and classification of scenic quality and aesthetic concern, quality objectives can be established for alteration of the visual resource, provisions are made to allow each discipline the freedom to explore viable alternatives to reach visual quality objectives, visual resources are considered part of land-use methods of planning and operation, and recognition is given to the variations in visual strength of the various types of natural landscape. The system is described in terms of variety classes, sensitivity levels, visual quality objectives, and map preparation for quality objectives before the system's application to the Yoho Valley is described.

Plantation failures occur for many reasons, such as improper site preparation or incorrect species selection. FRDA project 3.08 concerns itself with root disease, a biotic cause of plantation failure, the full impact of which is not yet understood. In this project, the distribution and impact of root diseases in both current and potential NSR lands was studied. With this information, a survey method was developed to assess the distribution of the diseases in young stands and plantations. Such survey methods are required so that hazard can be appraised and control measures implemented.

BEAP3D is an interactive package designed and written specifically for application to mining problems. It facilitates fully three-dimensional stress analysis of underground excavations and includes an analysis program integrated with the mine design process. For the Windows 3.1 version, the BEAP3D package consists of a boundary element analysis program for three-dimensional structural analysis, and a mine designer in which the pre- and post-processors are incorporated with the state-of-the-art graphics and integrated with the mine design process. The manual assumes familiarity with concepts of three-dimensional stress analysis. It first provides an overview of BEAP3D, the hardware and software requirements, applications areas, features, limitations, file conversion utility, non-conforming elements, and geometric nodes and function nodes. An example is included. It then gives descriptions of installation procedures, preparation of user input files, and program modules.

This paper intended to provide contextual information on a multi-year teacher development project. Gave an overview of the community college system and its faculty, outlined current practices in new faculty development, and described an induction program initiated to ease new faculty's transition to teaching in the community college. This program focused on 5 main areas: orientation, professional skills development and enhancement, access to information and resources, development of skills of self-assessment and reflective practice, and psychosocial aspects of development. It combined regular classroom observation and consultation sessions, bi-weekly focus group discussions, workshops, journal keeping, and individual life history interviews. This experience demonstrated that the provision of systematic and ongoing assistance and support could have significant short- and long-term benefits.

The behaviour of a $^{220}\text{Rn}/^{220}\text{Rn}$ progeny atmosphere was investigated under laboratory controlled conditions. Experiments were conducted in a large walk-in radon/thoron test facility operated in a flow-through fashion at seven minutes and 14 minutes residence times and in recirculating mode. A ^{232}Th dry source of activity was used as the source of ^{220}Rn . Experiments were conducted at two aerosol concentrations ranges, then the aerosols were mixed with the ^{220}Rn in a mixing chamber prior to their injection into the test facility. The aerosol/ ^{220}Rn atmosphere was thoroughly mixed using a fan, with temperature and humidity constant. Variables determined included ^{220}Rn , ^{212}Bi , ^{212}Pb , PAEC, aerosol concentration, beta-particle activity, and ^{220}Rn progeny plated-out on the facility. Plate-out measurements were conducted using filter material substrates placed on the walls and floor of the facility.

The Bell Mine is an open-pit copper mine located on Newman Peninsula, Babine Lake, about 65 km northeast of Smithers, British Columbia. Pit development began in 1970, and a mill was commissioned to produce a copper concentrate with significant gold content. The mine closed in June 1992. The current tests evaluated a pilot scale engineered wetland that removes metals from contaminated seepage. Addition of contaminated water to the two wetland ponds began in August 1991. This third annual progress report describes the project team; the history of the project, including the initial work plan, implementation, transplanting, and monitoring in 1991; results on vegetation, sediments, and microbiology in 1992; and the work program for 1992, subsequent monitoring, responsibilities for the Bell Mine and the consultants, and milestones for 1993.

The (r/p)-centroid problem is a well-known competitive location problem on networks. Two players in turn locate p and r facilities at the vertices of a network to maximize their market share. The problem is for the first player to find a set of locations that will minimize the second player's maximal market share. The (r/p)-centroid problem is NP-hard and is solved by means of a bilevel tabu search heuristic. Computational results confirm the value of the proposed approach.

Assessing the abundance of a resource is one of the fundamental phases of managing a fishery. The assessment involves not only quantifying a biomass but also predicting the reactions of this biomass to different management options. This study analyses biological data collected between 1983 and 1991 by the sampling program for commercial catches of mackerel. The main objective is to update this data and observe annual variations. The main results presented here may be used as the basis for future studies on more theoretical aspects of the biology of this species.

The surveys described in this report examined the numbers and species of birds, especially North American shorebirds, which used the rice fields of Suriname during the birds' overwintering season. This was undertaken in order to document if recent declines in shorebird population might be related to the use of toxic chemicals in important overwintering habitats such as the rice fields of Suriname. The main study objectives were to investigate the extent to which shorebirds used the Suriname rice fields, estimate their numbers and conduct preliminary investigations on the birds' diets to determine the potential pathways by which birds might become contaminated with certain pesticides used in present rice cultivation practices.

The province of British Columbia seeks to identify a long-term vision for sustainable economic development in the Boundary Bay area, particularly in the municipality of Delta. This study, along with seven others forming the Boundary Bay Area Study, will enable the province of B.C. to implement integrated strategies in response to natural resource issues in this region and will assist planners to build a local economy that is both viable and environmentally sustainable. This study identifies opportunities and economic development strategies on non-agricultural land for sustainable, non-polluting industries, although it excludes transportation and tourism which are dealt with in separate studies. It also provides an overview of the key environmental and non-environmental constraints to future economic development in the Boundary Bay Area (Delta).

In 1991, a ban on the construction of future municipal solid waste incinerators was announced and received legal force. The ban was enacted in response to serious human health and environmental impacts, economic considerations and waste management concerns: the air emissions from incinerators are a potential threat to both human health and the health of the environment; solid waste incinerators create large quantities of slag, ash and other solid waste residues; incineration is less cost-effective than recycling and other 3Rs waste minimization alternatives; the incineration of recyclable materials and other valuable components in the solid waste stream is incompatible with programs supporting waste reduction; and incineration is inconsistent with a pollution prevention approach. This document discusses each of these concerns.

Clustering for vehicle routing with a competitive neural network by J.-Y. Potvin and C. Robillard. Montréal : Université de Montréal, Centre de recherche sur les transports, 1993. 18 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (Publication ; no. 937)

MICROLOG 94-00072 1 fiche

A competitive neural network is designed to improve the initialization phase of a parallel route building heuristic for the vehicle routing and scheduling problem with time windows. The neural network identifies seed customers that are nicely distributed over the whole geographic area. In particular, the network converges towards the centroids of clusters of customers, when such clusters are present. Computational results on the standard set of problems of Solomon are reported, both with a simple initialization methodology and the neural network initialization.

MICROLOG 94-00100 2 fiche (Available on fiche only)

Comparison of the historic and current productivity performance of the Canadian and United States for-hire trucking industries, and discussion of the implications for competition for transborder traffic. The report discusses the creation of a reasonably comparable set of data from disparate sources in Canada and the U.S., then develops time series of key productivity indicators for both countries from 1978-88, assessing differences in national and sectoral performance within each country. The evolution of key input prices is considered to trace the efficacy of both productivity changes and other factors on costs/rates. The performance of the national trucking industries of Canada and the U.S. are described and the implications of this for transborder competition are considered. The study estimates the magnitude of transborder trucking, in particular historic growth and recent (1988) traffic structure for Canadian-domiciled carriers, and considers the possible impact of truck weight and dimension regulations, economic regulation, cabotage rules, truck regulations such as safety, trucking regulations such as dangerous goods, other regulations such as labour, truck technology, and freight flows on future domestic and transborder productivity and competitiveness.

La présente étude examine 11 expériences de participation à la décision dans le domaine de l'éducation mises en oeuvre au Canada et aux États-Unis. Ce système a donné lieu à des formules dites de gestion par l'école et s'est retrouvé dans les propositions de réforme du système d'éducation partout aux États-Unis. La mise en oeuvre du modèle au Canada est relativement récente. L'étude évalue les initiatives canadiennes dans le contexte de l'expérience américaine. Pour assurer la réussite de la participation à la décision, il est nécessaire de respecter les rôles légitimes des gestionnaires et des syndicats dans la prise de décision. L'adoption de ce système en Ontario exigerait de nombreux changements d'ordre législatif et une large politique de consultation de la part du gouvernement. Avant de recommander des changements à grande échelle, une étude approfondie des expériences courantes est préconisée.

Copper concentrate cleaning in column (HBMS)

by T. Cienski, V. Reynolds and L. Kuehn. Ottawa : Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, Mineral Sciences Laboratories, 1989. i, 8 p. (Report ; MSL 89-20(CR)) On cover: Cost recovery in mineral processing, job no. 50050.
MICROLOG 94-00214 1 fiche

A column flotation testing program was carried out using Trout Lake circuit feed to produce low zinc copper cleaner concentrate by using column flotation technology. Samples of rougher feed, final tails, rougher concentrate, column feed, column tails, and column concentrate were collected for copper and zinc analysis during each of 11 test runs. An additional series of bench scale and pilot tests were performed on grinding-roughing steps only, aiming at the reduction of zinc recovery in the rougher concentrate.

In June of 1991, the Treasurer of Ontario appointed a diverse group of Ontarians to advise him on the issue of a corporate minimum tax. He asked this Working Group to address the following question: what type of corporate minimum tax would be most effective at improving the fairness of the tax system by ensuring that all profitable corporations pay a fair share of the corporate tax burden? This report includes background information on a corporate minimum tax and an evaluation of a corporate minimum tax. It also provides conclusions and recommendations.

Ce volume a pour objet l'évolution géologique de l'empilement sédimentaire relativement non déformé qui borde et recouvre les marges ouest et sud du craton nord-américain au Canada. Il traite essentiellement de trois provinces tectonostratigraphiques et de leurs bassins: la Plate-forme de l'Intérieur, la Plate-forme d'Hudson et la Plate-forme du Saint-Laurent. L'évolution géologique de ces régions présente des similitudes à certains niveaux stratigraphiques, mais des différences importantes à d'autres. Le document examine également les modèles d'évolution et les comparaisons tectoniques.

This document presents a description and analysis of current grade 7, 8, and 9 programs in 50 English- and French-language schools. Identifies the following practices: focus on 'at risk' students, peer and teacher monitoring, comprehensive orientation programs, teacher-advisor support, academic assessment of multicultural students' levels, parent involvement, and others. Discovers the following perceptions among staff, parents, and students associated with innovative programs: sufficient curriculum and resource materials available, successful bonding with the school, adequate staffing, insufficient consultation with parents and students, satisfaction with programs, and others. The analysis shows that the Ministry and school boards must encourage teacher innovations, use of community resources, expanded programs for ethnic minorities, and program evaluation. This overview provides an understanding of the fishing industry's importance and its position in the agri-food sector and in Quebec's economy as a whole. It paints a portrait of the socio-economic situation of the industry and the main factors shaping it. It illustrates the development of the industry through its main activities (commercial fishing, aquaculture), species (groundfish, crab, shrimp, lobster, pelagic fish) and sectors (harvesting, processing, marketing). Finally, the report looks at how changes in American eating habits affect fish producers in Quebec, why crab fishermen did not benefit fully from increased landings, with what countries Quebec shrimp competes on world markets, what makes the harvesting of pelagic species difficult, and hindrances to aquaculture development.

Demande de fonds mutuels, co-intégration et modèle de correction des erreurs par J.-F. Fillon. Ottawa : Banque du Canada, 1988. 40 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (Document de travail ; 88-2) Ce document a été présenté au 28e Congrès annuel de la Société canadienne de science économique.

MICROLOG 94-00726 1 fiche

Cette étude débute par une brève analyse de l'évolution des fonds mutuels au Canada au cours des deux dernières décennies. Elle enchaine avec une étude économétrique de la fonction de demande, où l'hypothèse de co-intégration de la relation "désirée" de long terme est examinée à partir du modèle de correction des erreurs (MCE). Le modèle MCE est estimé en une étape, ainsi qu'en deux étapes selon la stratégie proposée par Engle et Granger. Les résultats du modèle MCE sont comparés à ceux d'un modèle d'ajustement partiel plus traditionnel. Le modèle MCE suggère un processus d'ajustement vers l'équilibre plus flexible et plus rapide que le modèle d'ajustement partiel.

L'objectif de cette étude est d'examiner la demande de monnaie au sens de M2 et M2⁺ et de déterminer si elle est une fonction stable d'un nombre limité de variables. L'étude débute par une revue des propriétés des équations traditionnelles de demande de monnaie semblables à celles qui ont déjà été documentées dans les études précédentes. La section suivante fournit le contexte dans lequel l'étude a été faite - on y décrit les principales innovations financières qui se sont produites dans les années 70 et 80, ainsi que le comportement de la vitesse de circulation des différents agrégats monétaires, et on passe en revue les arguments qui doivent entrer dans une fonction de demande de M2 et M2⁺. Les résultats d'estimation sont présentés à la troisième section. On y discute brièvement du problème posé par l'estimation d'une équation de demande de monnaie sous forme d'ajustement partiel et on y présente une formulation alternative en termes de taux de croissance. On commence l'étude détaillée par l'estimation de cette équation en taux de croissance lorsque l'on inclut seulement les variables explicatives traditionnelles - revenu et taux d'intérêt. Ensuite, on examine successivement la possibilité de substitution entre M2/M2⁺ et d'autres actifs financiers, en particulier les obligations d'épargne du Canada, l'effet sur la demande de monnaie des intérêts versés sur les dépôts inclus dans M2 et M2⁺ et la possibilité de déplacements de fonds entre dépôts détenus auprès des banques et ceux détenus auprès d'autres institutions financières. Après avoir passé en revue ces différents facteurs, on examine les propriétés des meilleures équations et, dans une dernière section, on conclut par une brève revue des travaux sur M2/M2⁺ en cours à la Banque du Canada.

Until recently, most of the analysis that the Bank of Canada has conducted on Canada's trade balance has been based on RDXF, a large macroeconomic model which contains a very detailed trade sector. A preliminary version of a new smaller and more transparent model is presented in this paper, with particular attention to the dynamics of exchange rate shocks, the predictive performance of the equations, and the results of stability tests. A series of simulations are presented, designed to estimate the contribution of movements in the exchange rate and other variables to the evolution of the trade balance over the period 1982-87.

The discovery of important accumulations of oil and natural gas in the eastcoast offshore region promises major economic and strategic benefits to Canada. Two important finds in particular, the Venture natural gas field and the Hibernia oil field, have spurred unprecedented oil and gas activity in Atlantic Canada in recent years. This document presents an historical perspective on the exploration; its environmental impact; icebergs, storms and safety; and jurisdictional disputes. It also looks at development issues such as the impact of oil and gas development, the Venture gas development and the Hibernia development plans. AP CA CI NR PS SC

The purpose of this report is to provide the different fishing industry players in Quebec with a portrait of the commercial situation and the economic impact of the pelagic fishery. The economic and commercial analysis focuses on 3 species: herring, mackerel and capelin. It covers trends in world markets, the processing sector and the performance of pelagic fishing fleets. Special attention is paid to market issues. Trends in demand and factors contributing to price fluctuations have a considerable impact on the pelagic fishery performance.

Logging practices and wildfire occurrences in Saskatchewan and Manitoba create wood residues with potential use for commercial enterprises and private households. These residues are suitable for applications in energy production, co-generation, steam plants, electrical generation, industrial and domestic heating, pulp, medium density fibreboard, chipboard or other manufactured wood products. Forest survey crews identified centres of demand and sampled logging operations and burns near each centre. They measured wood residues and tallied larger sound pieces of wood and all standing trees. Markets, fuelwood demand, environmental impact were studied and a socio-economic model developed. This paper reports on this 2 year study.

Evaluation and planning of water related monitoring networks on Prince Edward Island

Ottawa : Environment Canada ; Charlottetown : Dept. of the Environment, 1991. viii, 86 p. : ill., maps. Bibliogr.

This report examines those networks which measure the quality and quantity of the precipitation, the surface water and the groundwater in Prince Edward Island. After an initial inventory was complete the data were brought together and examined to determine the present degree of integration. P.E.I. was divided into regions and watersheds were selected to represent these regions. Next, the integration of the networks was designed. Based on needs and issues, recommendations are made for changes to the network, including a list of stations which should be considered for discontinuation and proposed locations where stations need to be established.

A project with the objective of identifying new grape varieties that would improve the quality and diversity of varietal and blended wines produced in British Columbia was summarized in an earlier report. This supplement presents the data for the tasting of the wines produced from the 1991 vintage. Some of the data presented in the summary report is repeated to make reading and use of this supplement more convenient. The conclusion presented in this supplement updates the information developed from the project. The section of the document discussing enology covers crush and fermentation of white and red varieties, cellaring and bottling and winemaking protocol for 1991 wines. Another section provides information on sensory evaluation.

From September 1989 to April 1992, NovaGold successfully operated a vat leach facility in northern New Brunswick to recover gold and silver, the first time the process was used commercially. NovaGold expects to construct a second vat leaching facility using agglomerated vat leach processes to recover gold from the Pine Cove property near Baie Verte, Newfoundland. This project was begun to confirm the efficient leachability of ore from the Touquoy deposit at Moose River, Nova Scotia by using the agglomerated vat leaching technique and to develop a pilot plant for future leach test work. Work included bulk sample collection, pilot plant design and construction, effects of agglomeration agents on the leaching process for gold recovery from the Touquoy ore, and pilot plant evaluation of an agglomeration vat/leach process.

Evaluation of solidified fabric filter ash from a mass burning municipal waste incinerator with lime-based air pollution control (Burnaby)

Burlington, Ont. : Environment Canada, Canada Centre for Inland Waters, Wastewater Technology Centre, 1991. i, 78 p. : ill. Bibliogr. MICROLOG 94-00285 1 fiche

A study was conducted to evaluate solidification techniques as potential treatment processes for fly ash from municipal waste incinerators. Conditioning lower/fabric filter ash from a lime-based air pollution control system on a mass burning municipal waste incinerator was solidified using cement and 3 types of waste pozzolanic materials as solidifying agents. Optimal formulations were selected based on the criterion that minimum quantities of solidifying agents were utilised in the formulations, while still maintaining a sufficiently high degree of physical strength. Solidified specimens of each formulation were subjected to a battery of laboratory tests to determine their physical, chemical and leaching properties, including leachate toxicity as determined by direct biological testing.

The current restrictions on lead content in potable water have led the International Copper Association to support research programs aimed at producing plumbing fittings containing low lead levels and developing free-machining brass without lead similar to alloy C36000. This report addresses the later issue where several attempts have been made to introduce soft inclusions and second phases into pure copper and copper-zinc alloys to improve the machinability. Machinability of the alloys was evaluated by comparing the shape and size of the chips obtained by drilling a standard size hole under controlled conditions. Materials studied were pure copper, copper-bismuth-indium, alloy C24000 (80/20 brass), tin bronze, and silicon brass. A number of attempts were made to form manganese/sulphur inclusions because of their beneficial effects on the machinability of steel.

A Final report to the Department of Energy, Mines and Resources on plasma-arc based gasification of coal for the preheating of the reducing gas for direct reduction processes by C.A. Pickles. Ottawa : Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, 1993. 23 p. : ill. Bibliogr. CANMET contract: 23440-9-9077/01-SZ. MICROLOG 94-00232 1 fiche

The most widely used process for the production of iron is the blast furnace, which although very efficient is only economical if the annual iron production rate is over two million tonnes. Because of the high capital cost of a large scale blast furnace, direct reduction processes may be a viable option for plants that wish to increase their iron production by small increments and to developing countries that want to establish an iron and steel industry. Many direct reduction processes have been developed but their success is limited because of the high cost of natural gas. This report describes the construction and operation of a plasma-arc-based coal gasifier to produce a high grade, high temperature reducing gas. The effects of plasma on the off-gas temperature and composition were studied while some important gasification parameters such as coal rank, reactant gas composition, coal bed depth, and electrical energy input were varied. The effect of adding fine coal and fine charcoal to the process on the off-gas composition was investigated.

Financial aspects of alternative harvest cutting methods and silvicultural treatments : a literature review by P.W. Daigle. Victoria : Canada-British Columbia Partnership Agreement of Forest Resource Development: FRDA II, 1992. vi, 51 p. Bibliogr. (FRDA report : 198) ISSN 0835-0752 ISBN 0-7726-1718-X MICROLOG 94-00647 1 fiche

The primary objective of this project was to summarize forestry and economic literature pertaining to the relative logging production, costs, and other economic values associated with clearcut and partial cut harvesting of Pacific Northwest forests. Each referenced study examines factors affecting the financial feasibility of alternative silvicultural systems. Most studies examine only the harvest production or costs. However, some studies go beyond the harvest activities and examine the financial implications inherent to silvicultural systems over whole rotations. A secondary objective was therefore to summarize literature that considers the relative financial aspects of silvicultural treatments over the course of clearcut and partial-cut rotations.

Fitness to drive in elderly individuals with progressive cognitive impairment

As health care continues to improve and the elderly population continues to expand, it can be expected that the group of older persons who drive and also suffer from Alzheimer's disease and other progressive dementias will become an increasingly larger proportion of society than it is now. The purpose of this study is to provide empirical evidence of the driving ability of individuals who are in the mild to moderate stages of progressive dementias, especially Alzheimer's disease. Because there is little research on this problem for guidance, a battery of neuropsychological tests was designed that appeared to be related to abilities necessary for driving a motor vehicle.

This book sets forth for the first time a comprehensive portrayal of how Canadians have responded to flooding. Chapter 1 describes the causes of floods and the vital role of flooding in our ecosystem. Chapter 2 chronicles how flooding has affected Canadians in the provinces and territories, documenting a selection of major events within the past 200 years. Chapter 3 traces the evolution of the roles of various levels of government in flood control, leading up to the national Flood Damage Reduction Program. Chapter 4 discusses two approaches to flood management. Finally, Chapter 5 briefly outlines an ecological perspective to floodplain protection and management.

The Canadian Education Association (CEA) sent out a questionnaire on food and nutrition to a sample 121 school boards. It dealt with programs undertaken by the school board, and the schools or other agencies that provide food for hungry students. It asked what, if any, nutrition programs there are, and who runs them. It also asked for the number of students and schools involved, the locations of the programs, the criteria used to determine which pupils were eligible, and who pays for the programs. It also dealt with board control over food sold on school premises, restrictions on the types of food used for fund raising, use of nutrition professionals, educational programs and policies, and problems encountered. This document contains the results of the questionnaire.

Cette étude décrit le fonctionnement des foyers d'hébergement transitoire pour les femmes maltraitées au Canada, en vue d'évaluer de quelle façon ils répondent aux besoins immédiats de ces femmes et leur apportent des solutions au problème qu'elles vivent. L'étude met l'accent sur trois domaines de recherche principaux. En premier lieu, l'examen des caractéristiques et du vécu des femmes maltraitées permet de déterminer jusqu'à un certain point ce dont elles ont besoin dans les foyers d'hébergement transitoire. L'étude se concentre ensuite sur les problèmes que pose la satisfaction concrète de ces besoins aux plans de la conception, de l'emplacement et de la prestation des services ainsi que de la gestion et de l'organisation des foyers d'hébergement. En guise de conclusion, la dernière partie du rapport évalue jusqu'à quel point les foyers d'hébergement transitoire peuvent offrir des solutions de rechange aux femmes maltraitées et décrit les éléments qui contribuent à la réussite des programmes et ceux qui constituent une entrave à la satisfaction des besoins des femmes maltraitées.

Backfill placed in stopes after extraction of ore in mines is used to support the adjacent rock. If strong support is required, the backfill is strengthened with cement, although in cold mines, it is possible to use ice as the cement. This report applies computer models for heat transfer to practical mining situations in a thick, longitudinally extensive orebody, and extends previous studies on stope freezing. The report demonstrates the feasibility of forming a strong frozen layer against the pillar ore waiting to be mined using either wet waste and coarse backfill run down the vertical face and frozen, or by the effect of pre-cooling the adjacent fill and rock and developing a frozen layer on the periphery of the pillar backfill. The report describes the computer model and the two methods.

Backfill placed in stopes after extraction of ore in mines is used to support the adjacent rock. If strong support is required, the backfill is strengthened with cement, although in cold mines, it is possible to use ice as the cement. This report applies computer models for heat transfer to practical mining situations in a thick, longitudinally extensive orebody, and extends previous studies on stope freezing. The report shows the significance of passing cold air through each of the adjacent mined openings on freezing using a two-dimensional cross-sectional model at right angles to the length of the stope. End effects are ignored. Conductivity and specific heat, the physical constants used, are mean values expected for rock and ice. The latent heat is calculated from the mean water content in the placed fill as determined by the mine. It is assumed that the fill is placed at a temperature of 1°C, that the adjacent rock is at the permafrost mean temperature of -8°C, that all the fill is placed in a short period of time, and that airflow starts at that time.

The composition of functionally gradient materials (FGM) varies gradually from the high heat and oxidation resistance on the outer surface provided by ceramics to the good mechanical toughness and thermal conductivity on the inner metallic surface. By controlling the composition, microstructure and ratio of porosity, the difference between the thermal expansion coefficients of the outer ceramic and inner metal sides should be compensated, and FGMs should be able to withstand thermal stress without cracking or delaminating. Most of the work in this areas has been carried out in Japan and to a lesser degree in the United States. This report covers the initial trials, carried out by Cametoid, on the synthesis and characterization of an experimental thermal barrier FGM system. ● CA CM NR PS SC

The 2d part undertakes a demonstration with a simple spatial interaction model to test the theory developed. A discussion on the applicability and properties of fuzzy areas of influence is addressed in the 3d part, notably over the central places theory. Since the concept of market area is intermitted with the central place theory, it is worth investigating the implications of fuzzy areas of influence. The paper then concludes with the findings related to relaxed market areas and possible further research. CO PR PS QU SC

The greenhouse theory holds that adding large quantities of carbon dioxide, and just as importantly, other trace gases, to the atmosphere will warm the earth. This document discusses this theory with some background and an analysis. This includes the relationship between atmospheric CO2 and climate, sources of carbon dioxide (fossil fuel and deforestation), sinks of carbon dioxide (vegetation and oceans), and the evidence of an increase in greenhouse gases. The implications of increased atmospheric levels of CO2 are included. Parliamentary action taken in the course of this theory, is also presented. CA CI EV PS SC

This information document is designed to present the approach that the Canadian Parks Service favours to meet the preservation, commemoration and regional objectives set for Grosse Ile. The paper is in four parts. A first section examines the heritage interest of Grosse Ile as well as current use of the site and condition of resources. The second chapter discusses the long-term objectives which the Canadian Parks Service intends to pursue at Grosse Ile. The third part focuses on the issue of development of the site by opposing advantages and constraints. Finally, the last section presents the proposed development concept and discusses prospects of visitation to the site.

In any large permanent sample plot program there are errors in the data returned from the field that must be detected. Moreover, it is not feasible to immediately return to the plots to rectify mistakes and therefore temporary corrections must be made in the office before analyzing the data. Data from 111 plots of precommercially thinned spacing trials were prepared for analysis. This document reports on the procedures used for editing that data because there was a lack of helpful information in the literature and because the approach developed should be applicable to many permanent sample plot programs.

The reproductive stock size of the Gulf of St. Lawrence mackerel is currently calculated using the total egg production model. Female fecundity, one of the most important variables in this model, is determined as being the number of oocytes having a diameter greater than 140 µm just before spawning. This definition of fecundity is inadequate for indeterminate serial spawners such as anchovy and mackerel. The batch fecundity method involves defining the fecundity of these fish by multiplying the number of oocytes expelled per batch by the number of batches spawned during the spawning season. To determine these variables, the different phases in the development of the oocyte must be examined and described. In the case of Gulf of St. Lawrence mackerel, a histological study was carried out on gonads gathered during the 1991 spawning season. • CA CF FI LS SC

How large are the costs of disinflation in Canada?

by B.V. Cozier and G. Wilkinson. Ottawa : Bank of Canada, 1990. 28 p. Bibliogr. (Working paper ; 90-6) MICROLOG 94-00736 1 fiche

This paper estimates the costs of disinflation, in terms of the output or employment loss necessary to achieve a reduction in inflation. There has been some controversy recently over the size of these costs in Canada. Within the context of an expectation-augmented Phillips curve, a framework which permits direct calculation of the output-inflation trade-off, estimates are made, and presented. In using this framework, questions are answered, such as: how large are the output costs of disinflation in Canada? Are these costs temporary or permanent? Are the costs of disinflation higher at lower rates of inflation? And are they higher when the economy is at or below full employment?

Federal-provincial crop insurance programs were established in the early 1960's to reduce the impacts of crop failure due to natural causes. However, with the increased frequency of drought in recent years and the poor performance of grain markets, there is need to improve the performance of these programs and to design new ones. This study reports on the development of new risk areas for Manitoba.

Bon nombre de questions sont liées à la politique canadienne à l'égard des réfugiés. Ce bulletin est axé sur le rapport étroit qui existe depuis longtemps entre une préoccupation essentiellement humaine, l'accueil et l'établissement de ceux qui ne peuvent retourner dans leur mère patrie pour quelque raison que ce soit, et une considération foncièrement intéressée ou pragmatique, la politique d'immigration. Ce document vise donc à savoir jusqu'à quel point les critères de la politique d'immigration devraient s'appliquer à la sélection à l'étranger des réfugiés qui souhaitent venir s'installer au Canada.

The Ministry of Housing initiated the Convert to Rent Program as a method for encouraging the intensification of housing in Ontario communities. Some property owners fear that small rental units will cause declining property values. Research objectives of this project were to provide scientific evidence regarding the true impact (particularly in terms of property values) of conversion work on neighbouring properties and to provide knowledge regarding the public opinions and perceptions of property owners concerning a range of potential impacts of rental conversions on neighbouring properties. Study methodology is discussed in detail and findings are presented. Descriptive statistics, survey marginals and a field report are appended.

The Impact of restrictive covenants on affordable housing and non-single-family uses of homes : a Waterloo Region case study by P. Filion. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1992. vi, 54 p. : maps. Bibliogr.

MICROLOG 94-00471 1 fiche

This report investigates the extent of the use made of restrictive covenants, their effectiveness and impact as instruments of land use control, and the attitude of planners and other professionals promoting affordable housing and inclusionary zoning towards them. It also comes up with recommendations aiming to lift restrictive covenants' detrimental impact on affordable housing and non-single-family residential uses. The report first engages in a discussion from a legal perspective and then turns to debates about their future role. Next, it deals with tensions that are likely to accompany attempts to implement inclusionary zoning by-laws in an urban context where restrictive covenants are widespread. The remainder of the report centres on a Waterloo Region case study and interprets these findings.

Implementation of monetary policy in Canada with same-day settlement : issues and alternatives by D. Longworth and P. Muller. Ottawa : Bank of Canada, 1991. 24 p. Bibliogr. (Working paper ; 91-3) Paper prepared for the annual meetings of the Canadian Economics Association.

The move to an electronic large value transfer system (LVTS) with same-day settlement will lead to much more certainty in the settlement positions of direct clearers at the Bank of Canada that is presently the case. Therefore the monetary policy operating systems that will be used with LVTS may have some fundamental differences from the existing system. This paper examines the two major alternative systems that were mentioned in a previous paper: Implementation of monetary policy in the absence of reserve requirements. The first of these systems is built around a borrowed funds schedule, which has some similarities to a system currently used in Sweden. The second system involves securities sales to (and purchases from) the Bank of Canada, and is similar to the system currently used in the United Kingdom. Other systems are also briefly reviewed.

It is intended for use by both scientists and by practising foresters. To make the information contained in this volume more easily accessible, insects are grouped according to the tree species that they attack rather than by their entomological classification, and, for this reason, insects found on a given tree species are presented in the same chapter. The annual reports of the Forest Insect and Disease Survey have provided most of the information on history of outbreaks that is found in the text.

The Reclamation Advisory Committee (RAC) has developed a series of working policies and technical initiatives to deal with acid rock drainage (ARD) from previous project reviews and research. This document is an attempt to present those rules and guidelines as a comprehensive working policy. As better ARD control methods are developed the RAC will endeavor to incorporate them into the ARD policy. This interim policy reflects the RAC's current philosophy of preventing ARD generation through prediction and design, avoiding long term treatment where possible. It deals with proposed mine developments, prediction, prevention, collection and treatment, permitting, bonding, monitoring, historic sites, existing mines, commercial leaching, and exploration.

The paper discusses the model estimated and the data; describes the estimation results, and considers the implications of the results, focussing on the implied costs of reducing the rate of inflation. It also provides some concluding comments.

This guide provides information to help those considering or undertaking renovation to choose methods which can minimize their exposure to lead-based paint at each step of the renovation process. It opens with a look at the history and health concerns associated with lead-based paints and then examines the means of controlling exposure to lead during home renovations, and the measurement of lead in paint. Next, it discusses how to determine lead exposure from paint and the exposure risk of occupants. Renovation methods to control exposure, special terms and regulations associated with removal of lead-based paint, and hazard control procedures conclude the document.

Lead shot contamination of waterfowl and their habitats in Canada

Judith Kennedy and Simon Nadeau, editors. Ottawa : Canadian Wildlife Service, Headquarters, 1993. 109 p. : ill., maps. Bibliogr. (Technical report series ; no. 164) ISSN 0831-6481
MICROLOG 94-00379 2 fiche

In this collection of research papers, exposure of waterfowl to lead across Canada is assessed by a variety of techniques. The 1st paper deals with a nationwide survey that analyzed the concentration of lead in bones of young ducks of 3 species. Subsequent papers describe gizzard analyses, in which gizzards from dead birds are examined for pieces of lead pellets, and other techniques for detecting lead in tissue samples and in natural environments. The collection reveals a national picture of the areas where waterfowl are most exposed to the risk of poisoning from lead pellets in Canada, and attempts to assess the degree of this risk to Canadian wildlife in general.

This document considers the following issues: Should the law be reformed to remove the distinction between children born within and outside marriage? What changes are needed to remove the legal distinction between children? In adoption proceedings how should the relationship between the child and the biological parents be recognized? How should the biological connection be dealt with in the law relating to inheritance? How should developments in reproductive technology be dealt with? How can the parent-child relationship be established? Should people who carry out a parenting role but are not the biological or adoptive parents of a child be recognized as parents for some purposes? And should the changes be made in a new law, or should changes be made only to existing laws, or should there be both?

In November 1992, the Nova Scotia Agri-Food Development Strategy was jointly released by the Nova Scotia Federation of Agriculture, Agriculture Canada, and the Nova Scotia Dept. of Agriculture and Marketing. A key element of this strategy was market orientation. This discussion paper outlines the main issues faced by the Marketing Services Branch along with recommendations for future direction and action. The paper includes discussion of the need for a common vision and mission; more cooperation, partnerships, and alliances; improved communication and information; and a stronger marketing effort. Measurement biases in the Canadian CPI by A. Crawford. Ottawa : Bank of Canada, 1993. viii, 54 p. Bibliogr. (Technical report ; no. 64) ISSN 0713-7931 ISBN 0-662-20920-6 MICROLOG 94-00275 1 fiche

The consumer price index (CPI) may be an imperfect measure of changes in the cost of living owing to measurement biases known as commodity substitution bias, new goods bias, quality bias, and outlet substitution bias. When the sum of these individual biases is positive, the rate of change in the CPI overstates the increase in the cost of living. This study attempts to quantify the four potential sources of measurement bias in the Canadian CPI.

Bien que le missile de croisière ne constitue pas une nouveauté en soi, le missile actuel sous ses diverses formes s'écarte de façon frappante de la technologie en matière d'armement et l'on ne saisis pas encore très bien toutes les répercussions qu'il aura sur la stratégie militaire, le contrôle des armes et la politique de l'OTAN. Ce bulletin d'actualité se penche sur les missiles de croisière et se penche sur des points, tels les caractéristiques des missiles de croisière, et la polémique engendrée par les missiles de croisière. Mortality in semi-mature white spruce on Prince Edward Island : age-related foliar nutrient studies by P.O. Saloniemi...et al. Fredericton : Forestry Canada - Maritimes Region, 1988. iii, 14 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (Information report : M-X-172) ISSN 0834-406X ISBN 0-662-16682-5

There are about 50,000 ha of white spruce stands on formerly agricultural land in Prince Edward Island, representing about 30% of the province's merchantable softwood resource. Over 60% of the field spruce is 30-50 years of age, about the limit of their growth. Since this early mortality is limited to white spruce growth on formerly cultivated fields, the study postulated that nutrient deficiencies might be the main cause of the early mortality. With the assumption that P.E.I. white spruce is genetically similar to white spruce on nearby undisturbed soils, comparisons of nutrient level trends were carried out over age sampling continuum in the two situations. Both current and year-old foliage were sampled, because deficiencies are sometimes characterized by withdrawal of scarce nutrients for old to new foliage.

The report's main objective is to identify the most economical sewage treatment systems, technically capable of achieving compliance with the Fisheries Act, for communities in the Northwest Territories. Compliance is based on the acute lethality of the effluent measured at end-of-pipe, or the last point of control, prior to the effluent's release into a water frequented by fish. The study looked at these toxic components of effluents: nitrogen-based, chlorine, BOD and oxygen demand, heavy metals, organic solvents, anionic surfactants, and hydrogen sulphide. Treatment technology reviewed source control, and lagoon, biological, physical-chemical, and land treatment.

The white pine weevil is the greatest obstacle to production of quality stems in white pine plantations in Quebec. Observations on the evolution of the damage caused by this insect since the first year of attack were documented in the surveys carried out in 15 plantations located in the southern and central parts of Quebec. The measurements allowed us to confirm the relevance of the published data and to better define the principal criteria of vulnerability to weevil attacks in white pine plantations. This information report focuses on the subject.

This paper examines the implications of the adoption of certain conditional rules for monetary policy within the context of a simple theoretical model. The paper has nothing to say about central bank mandates or about the role of central bank objective functions in determining the nature of monetary policy. It presumes that the monetary authorities will be concerned with more than the variance of real output, at least as it is determined in simple macroeconomic models.

In macro models, some form of price or wage stickiness is often needed in order to generate real effects from nominal disturbances. This paper pursues an idea proposed in a model of price setting by intertemporally optimizing firms facing quadratic costs of changing prices. The implications for aggregate macroeconomic relationships of this behaviour on the part of firms are examined.

It is especially important that the procedure be applicable to arbitrary initial inventories and that it be validated with respect to alternate approaches. Following a description of the procedure to solve Bateman systems of arbitrary length and to estimate the reliability of the solution, the report illustrates its applicability by computing the evolution of the neptunium series inventory in Bruce A burnup fuel.

Assessment of explosion vent panels, used to release a potentially damaging sudden buildup of internal pressure generated by a gas or dust explosion in a building or other structure. Prototype panels measuring about 30" x 30" were mounted on one of the ends of a cylindrical enclosure having an internal volume of approximately 65 cu ft. The enclosure was filled with an explosive methane-air mixture, then ignited. Various panel constructions were assessed for ability to prevent excessive overpressures.

Permanent mould casting of copper-base alloys, ICA project no. 452A : final report, phase II by M. Sahoo, M. Elboudjdaini and V.S. Sastri. Ottawa : Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, Metals Technology Laboratories, 1993. x, 63 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (Report ; MTL 93-008(TR-R))

MICROLOG 94-00230 1 fiche

Because of the current United States Environmental Protection Agency restriction on lead content in potable water and problems associated with the disposal of sand contaminated by lead, the International Copper Association wants to promote the permanent mould casting of low-lead (and if possible, no lead) copper-base alloys to produce plumbing fittings in North America. The basic characteristics of the process, such as casting fluidity, hot tearing resistance, gating and risering design, mechanical properties, and corrosion behaviour, need to be established because of the lack of information in the open literature. Phase I of the project addressed some of these issues in silicon brasses, high-zinc yellow brass, low-zinc yellow brass, and leaded red brass. Phase II focused on similar studies on the silicon bronzes, establishment of casting parameters to produce a typical washroom faucet, and more detailed investigation of corrosion behaviour, including total immersion and lead leaching studies. Casting trials were performed in an IMR casting machine with tilt pouring capability, in which the moulds were dipped into a quench bath of graphite in water between pours.

Presents a series of maps and tables for salmonid nursery lakes surveyed in 1991-92 in the Nass River system. Information includes essential standardized physical parameters in support of salmon production assessment in freshwater lakes. Physical parameters include lake area, maximum measured depth, mean depth, elevation, shoreline development, mean annual precipitation, watershed area, lake coordinates, shoreline length, and lake volume. Hydroacoustic transect lengths and lake areas at depth are presented in tables. Maps show watershed boundaries, topography, bathymetry, and hydroacoustic transect locations.

The Productivity-inflation nexus revisited : Canada, 1969-88

by F. Novin. Ottawa : Bank of Canada, 1991. ii, 44 p. : ill. Bibliogr. (Working paper ; 91-1)
MICROLOG 94-00739 1 fiche

This paper investigates the relationship between productivity and inflation for the 1969-88 period. This paper extends and provides an update of a former study of the productivity-inflation nexus in Canada which covered the 1963-79 period. In that study, it was found that, at a long term prediction, a permanent one percentage point positive shock to inflation translates into an eventual six point zero five percentage point increase in inflation and a one point three eight percentage point reduction in productivity growth. This amounts to a point two three percentage point reduction in productivity growth for each one percentage point increase in inflation. The aim of this present study is to examine whether this result remains valid when data for the 1980s are included in the sample.

This project was aimed primarily at technology transfer, demonstrating the integration of silvicultural and harvesting techniques for protecting spruce understories in mixedwoods. This report provides details of the silvicultural component. It stresses post-harvest implications, particularly blowdown risk and growth and yield potential of released understory, and regeneration and growth of spruce, aspen, and poplar on mechanically harvested mixedwood sites. The project addresses concerns about maintaining the coniferous component of mixedwood forests and finding alternatives to clearcutting. It covers the current status of operational understory protection and some related aspects of integrated resource management.

Ce rapport fait le bilan des insectes et des maladies des arbres dans la région des Maritimes en 1992 et donne, au besoin, un aperçu des conditions prévues pour 1993. Les ravageurs et les problèmes des conifères, des feuillus et des zones importantes comme les pépinières, les vergers à graines, les plantations et les peuplements d'arbres de Noël sont décrits tels qu'ils ont été observés en 1992. Un chapitre portant sur la surveillance de la santé des forêts examine les divers aspects des travaux se rapportant aux changements dans les conditions forestières, dont quelques-uns sont encore inexplicables. Les systèmes de surveillance des insectes forestiers ainsi que les pièges à phéromones et lumineux, deux importants moyens de prédire les changements dans les populations, sont brièvement décrits. Une liste de rapports et de publications portant sur les ravageurs forestiers est incluse.

Whitehorse : Executive Council Office, Aboriginal Language Services, 1993. 48 p. : ill. ISBN 1-55018-077-0
MICROLOG 94-00580 1 fiche

Language is the vehicle of culture. The way we share culture and pass it on to the young is deeply interwoven with the ideas expressed in our language. Aboriginal people know this intuitively. During the survey for this report, many young people were interviewed who did not know their native tongue. An overview of all Yukon Aboriginal language groups is given, along with information presented on the Gwich'in, Han, Kaska, Northern Tutchone, Southern Tutchone, Tagish, Tlingit, and Upper Tanana.

MICROLOG 94-00727 1 fiche

This paper reviews the empirical evidence on violations of uncovered interest parity and explores whether the evidence is consistent with the behaviour of speculative bubbles. The problem of testing for bubbles in exchange rates, without an accepted model of fundamentals, are then examined and a variety of tests are suggested. Extensive tests are run using weekly forward rate and survey data for seven major exchange rates. Results are presented.

Residential density thresholds are used by developers, designers and regulators to achieve a balance between land use efficiency and an acceptable quality of residential environment. This study used an environmental psychology approach to evaluate and explain the effect of home and neighbourhood crowding, as indicated by various density measures, on resident satisfaction with respect to dwelling conditions, neighbourhood quality and neighbourhood facilities. The study was executed at eleven sites in Ottawa, chosen to represent low, medium and high density housing types, and controlled for housing mix and land use mix. Results are presented.

A Review and evaluation of pillar design criteria for use in evaporite mines : N.S. MDA : final report by R.J. Beddoes and A.D. Mackintosh. Halifax : Canada-Nova Scotia Cooperation Agreement on Mineral Development, 1993. iv, 72 p. : ill. Bibliogr. CANMET contract: 23440-2-9140/01-SQ.

MICROLOG 94-00239 1 fiche

The literature on pillar design in mining was reviewed to identify methods proposed for use in evaporites that might be adapted for the application. Since the majority of empirical design formulae were developed from observations in coal mines and involve the width and height of the pillar and constants related to the strength of the coal mass, a survey of salt and potash mines was conducted to establish a relevant data base of pillar design and pillar performance. This information, augmented by some case histories from the literature, was used to test the applicability of several of the empirical design methods. Applicable rock mass strength constants were determined for evaporite pillar design using the equations of Holland and Bieniawski, in addition to one new relationship. The Canadian Salt Co. mine at Pugwash, Nova Scotia was used to test the proposed design formula. A series of convergence stations was established in the mine to assess the stability of existing pillars.

Data from Lake Ladoga are utilized to illustrate that the algorithms currently being used to monitor near-surface chlorophyll concentrations in oceanic waters are inadequate when applied to water masses optically complicated by their proximity to land masses. Methodologies originally developed for retrieving simultaneous concentrations of chlorophyll, suspended minerals, and dissolved organic carbon from volume reflectance measurements of Lake Ontario are shown to display success in Lake Ladoga. It is argued that, despite the spatial and temporal variability of cross sections of the optically-active components of the water body, the determination of these cross-sections for principal water bodies should comprise both global and regional climate change studies.

Scientific foundations for the simulation of ecosystem function and management in FORCYTE-11 by J.P. Kimmins. Edmonton : Northern Forest Research Centre, 1993. xii, 88 p. : ill. Bibliogr.

(Information report : NOR-X-328) ISSN 0704-7673 ISBN 0-662-20274-0

The FORCYTE-II (FORest nutrient Cycling and Yield Trend Evaluator) forest simulation model combines the traditional historical bioassay modeling approach with process-based simulation modeling. It provides a method of predicting future forest biomass yield under a variety of management conditions. The hybrid simulation approach to modeling the management and long-term productivity of forested ecosystems is reviewed, and the representation of production ecology, succession, and various nutrient transfer pathways in FORCYTE-II are described. The key driving function in the model, the concept of site quality, and the simulation of site quality change that is used in the model are discussed. The importance of an accurate definition of the state of the simulated ecosystem at the start of a run is emphasized, and the use of the ECOSTATE (STATE of the ECOSystem) file in this process is described. Examples of the how FORCYTE-II can simulate secondary succession and the impacts of forest management on ecosystem form and function are given. There is a brief review of the limitations of the FORCYTE-II modeling approach.

This volume is concerned primarily with the geological development of the relatively undeformed sediments that border and cover the western and southern margins of the North American craton in Canada. It deals principally with three tectonostratigraphic provinces and their basins: Interior Platform, Hudson Platform, and St. Lawrence Platform. The objectives are threefold. First, to present a balanced introduction to the regions for a geologist who has little or no previous knowledge of them. Second, to present fresh regional perspectives and new interpretations. Third, to provide a text and regional guide for earth science teachers and their students.

Family test plantations for tree breeding programs are used to provide information on genetic quality of the trees in the test plantations, and on the genetic quality of their parents. Performance traits are measured or rated and the data analyzed to estimate each tree's genetic quality for net value of yield at harvest. This report gives measurement data used to score and select family test trees in two parallel breeding programs for jack pine in Saskatchewan and Manitoba. For both programs, height and diameter data at 15 years from planting were used, including stem quality, resistance to western gall rust, and wood density at 15, 16, or 17 years from planting. Mating was done in 1990-92.

In an economy where both supply and demand shocks are at work, there is considerable uncertainty associated with any estimates of potential output and the natural rate of unemployment. Measurement errors may bias the estimates of parameters that are central to important policy conclusions. This paper offers evidence on the relationship between inflation and the change in the gap. The evidence comes from a Monte Carlo exercise using an unobserved components model of output. The paper also offers further thoughts on the specification, measurement and estimation issues involved and some concluding remarks on the implications of the results for current policy debates.

Explanations for the co-movements of economic aggregates depend to a large extent on the type of innovations that give rise to those movements. Two distinctive theories have recently developed restrictions that allow supply and demand shocks to be identified. This paper applies these techniques to the Canadian data over the period 1966-88.

Ce document se veut une représentation fidèle et suivie de l'industrie des ressources minières en Ontario afin de pouvoir en évaluer correctement l'état et les perspectives d'avenir. On y trouvera des statistiques importantes sur divers aspects de l'industrie, y compris, les quantités et la valeur des produits miniers, la main-d'œuvre, les salaires, les frais de production, les activités de fonte et d'affinage, les dépenses d'exploration et d'exploitation, les claims miniers, les permis de prospection et les travaux d'évaluation. Certaines des tables indiquent les chiffres sur les emplois, les salaires, les frais de production et les activités de fonte et d'affinage jusqu'en 1990, tandis que d'autres fournissent des données jusqu'en 1991.

En 1990, Environnement Canada a établi la Division de la technologie de l'assainissement de l'air (TAA) au sein de la Direction du développement technologique (DDT). La DDT appuie le développement de technologies visant à prévenir la pollution, à l'enrayer et à en corriger les effets néfastes. La TAA a pour mission d'aider les Canadiens à tirer parti des techniques permettant de réduire les émissions dans l'atmosphère. Ce document porte sur la technologie de l'assainissement de l'air présenté par la TAA.

Technologies for a cleaner environment : energy efficiency, alternative and renewable energies

Ottawa : Energy, Mines and Resources Canada, Canada Centre for Mineral and Energy Technology, 1991. 23 p. : ill. ISBN 0-662-18813-6
MICROLOG 94-00535 1 fiche

CANMET's R&D activities encourage its client industries, through cost-shared projects, to develop and use leading-edge technologies. In keeping with Canada's concern for the future of our environment, CANMET is developing technologies that are clean and consistent with the long-term goal of sustainable development. This brochure highlights the research being done with different renewable energy resources such as bioenergy, new energy supply technologies, alternative transportation fuels, and the energy diversification research laboratory.

Tenant organizing at Cityhome : a history of umbrella organizations

This study documents the work carried out by tenants as they attempted to develop umbrella tenant organizations in housing owned and managed by the City of Toronto's non-profit housing corporation: Cityhome. The study spans a period from 1976 to 1992. It argues that six minimum conditions have to be met if the organization is to be successful. These include: the maintenance of an active and interested membership; clear goals; an environment conducive to tenant organization; good leadership; the presence of at least one paid staff person; and dependable resources.

Term structure, amortization, and the demand for mortgages in Canada by J. Breslaw, I. Irvine and A. Rahman. Ottawa : Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation, 1992. vii, 34 p. : ill. Bibliogr.

MICROLOG 94-00464 1 fiche

This document asks how do demographic and economic factors influence mortgage behaviour? In particular, how do these factors determine the choice of both term and amortization period? It presents information on the factors which caused mortgage demand to fluctuate to the degree witnessed in the 1980s. To this end, it models the mortgage choice decision as involving options on both the term and the amortization period. It uses a database which contains details on the financial and demographic characteristics of households.

Terms of trade movements in major industrial countries, 1969-89

by S. Roger. Ottawa : Bank of Canada, 1991. 27 p. : ill. (Working paper ; 91-2)
MICROLOG 94-00738 1 fiche

This paper examines absolute and relative terms of trade movements in twelve major industrial countries over the 1969-89 period. The variability of various industrial countries' absolute terms of trade is examined, together with the correlation between such terms of trade movements and the movements of oil and non-oil commodity prices. The co-variability of these countries' terms of trade and the variability of their relative terms of trade are considered. It also examines the correlation between each country's relative terms of trade and oil and non-oil commodity prices.

This paper examines the steady-state and dynamic effects of shifts in the terms of trade and the level of the government debt in a growing, resource-based, small open economy. The study is based on a simulation model that is loosely calibrated to Canadian data. The model describes a small country that produces non-tradables and resources, and imports manufactured goods. The behaviour of consumers and firms is derived from explicit optimization in an intertemporal setting.

Waste salt placed into mined-out openings at potash mines consolidates over time due to drainage and evaporation of water and to recrystallization. For the determination of support waste salt will provide to the walls, floor, and roof of the openings, the consolidation rates must be known. Tilt meters possess the potential for high resolution tilt/deformation measurements in very demanding environments. This report describes a commercial tilt meter system manufactured by Applied Geomechanics Inc. that was modified to measure compaction in salt backfill, as well as to measure the rotation of hanging wall and footwall strata during subsidence.

This report seeks to answer questions regarding tourism as a suitable land use in the Boundary Bay area; the demand for tourism and expanded outdoor recreation areas, the types of appropriate tourism; the capability of serving an increasing number of tourists; and the types of activities potentially supported by the natural and cultural resource base. Finally, three management approaches are reviewed. These include solving current problems, developing water-oriented recreation; and developing a fully integrated management approach. This report provides an overview, not a detailed assessment, of tourism and outdoor recreation opportunities in the Boundary Bay area. For the purpose of this inventory, tourism facilities in urban areas are limited to accommodation and museums. Theatres and shops are not included. The outdoor recreation areas are nature-based. Golf courses are included, but tennis courts are not since they are more or less independent of their natural surroundings.

questions whether traditional views on trade and monetary policy are appropriate to our changing circumstances. While supporting the drive for North American free trade, he wades into the contentious issue of floating versus fixed exchange rates and argues strongly for pegging the Canadian dollar to the U.S. dollar.

Treatment and recovery of heavy metals from acid mine drainage using polymer chelation and membrane filtration : final report

The process considered in this study is based on the use of sequestering or chelating agents, with emphasis on water-based macromolecular compounds, which demonstrate selectivity for the extraction of copper, lead, zinc, and cadmium, coupled with an appropriate membrane that would effectively separate the organic metal complex and allow the metal-free aqueous phase to permeate through the membrane as a treated effluent. The process design has the objectives of generating a concentrate which would contain close to 100 percent of the metal chelates in the solution which could then be acidified in order to recover the metals from the chelants, allowing both the metals and the chelants to be reused. The method of the polymer binding-membrane filtration was evaluated for the removal of heavy metals from acid mine drainage. The experimental studies were done on bench-scale level using both actual and synthetic mining effluents. The report includes test results, discussion, and recommendations for future work.

This literature survey covers a variety of issues relating to the quality of the urban water supply. It begins with a brief historical overview, and goes on to look at the health and politics of water, including issues of contamination. Next, it discusses water quantity including the main uses to which we put our water supply, and means of regulating or charging for usage. The main part of the report deals with water quality, describing how drinking water is assessed in terms of physical, chemical and biological parameters which are deemed to be important because of health or aesthetic reasons. Municipal water treatment and distribution discusses storage and disinfection, followed by a discussion of other treatments such as fluoridation and aeration. Incidental effects of distribution looks at a variety of other related issues such as asbestos fibres or metals in water.

The purpose of this report is to use the Region's lake acid precipitation network's water chemistry and biophysical data to see if significant statistical correlations can be drawn between the basin characteristics and lake water chemistry. Acidity, which is measured as pH is an important controlling variable for aquatic life, so a number of statistical models were developed to see how well they can predict pH with changes in sulfate, the main tracer of anthropogenic acid deposition. The best of these models are then used to predict how pH will change with various acid loading scenarios.

The Western Grain Transportation Act (WGTA) confers upon the National Transportation Agency the authority to prescribe the annual rate scale for the movement of western grain by rail on or before April 30th for the next crop year. This publication provides information on statutory grain freight rates from local delivery points to Vancouver, Prince Rupert, Churchill, and Thunder Bay. The publication lists the local shipping points alphabetically, the railway serving the point, the mileage to port upon which the freight rate is based, the base rate scale, the total rail freight rate, the amount of rail freight rate to be paid by the federal government, and the producer share prescribed under the WGTA.

Wife abuse : a workplace issue : a guide for change

by D. Denham and J. Gillespie. Ottawa : Canadian Council on Social Development, 1992. 57 p. Bibliogr. ISBN 0-662-20270-8
MICROLOG 94-00666 1 fiche

This guide focusses on the needs of women who are abused physically, emotionally or sexually by their partners in their intimate relationships. Harassment, sexual harassment and sexual assault are not covered in this guide. This guide specifically looks at wife abuse because women who are experiencing it form a huge but hidden part of our workforce. Raising awareness about the issues of wife abuse and its impact on the workplace will serve a dual purpose. It will provide abused women with the support and resources they need and it will also create a workplace environment which gives the clear message that any form of violence against women is not to be tolerated.

This document addresses the types of disabilities represented among the women and their impact on the women's self-esteem, and need for support and encouragement. It examines the women's experiences with education of all types, their satisfaction or lack of satisfaction, and the degree of accessibility. It also examines the women's employment history, past and present, and their experiences with job-related discrimination. It addresses the incomes of the women. It concludes with a series of recommendations. AP LA PR SA

Wood composite products evolution, major demands and opportunities

MICROLOG 94-00713 1 fiche

The Canadian Forest Service chose to look outside itself and the forest industries to commission a sketch perspective, an overview of sorts, on the prospects for wood composite product evolution. The Service asked for this overview of the major demands and opportunities ahead, and the limitations, as one input to help develop the CFS composite products program. The scope of this review was left somewhat open, of necessity, the intent being to go lightly where the path seems clear, but to look more closely where potentials seem obscure or roadblocks loom high. Emphasis was to be on the product potentials and developmental possibilities, not on the production processes. • CA FO SC

Workers' Compensation Board of Nova Scotia : Financial report 1989

Halifax : The Board, 1990. 12 p. : ill. CSI 52131.001. MICROLOG 94-00705 1 fiche

The Board is responsible for providing workers' compensation coverage to Nova Scotia employers and collection of assessment revenue. It classifies industries, determines rates and adjudicates claims resulting from work-related accidents, making decisions concerning the payment of claims as a result of reports from workers, employers, doctors and hospitals. It assists in the rehabilitation of workers returning to the work force, as well as the permanently disabled. To assist in claims processing the Board's Medical Department performs physical examinations and acts as medical advisor in the claims adjudication. This annual report discusses the activities of the past year, with information on financial management, investments, and self-insured accounts receivable. A commentary on the financial statements, the financial statements, and comparative statistics are included. AP LA PR

Youth unemployment in Canada -- Rev.

by K.B. Kerr. Ottawa : Library of Parliament, Research Branch, 1993. 16 p. Bibliogr. (Current issue review ; 82-4E) French ed. (Le Chômage chez les jeunes...) on the same fiche. Revised 14 May, 1993. ISBN 0-660-15206-1 MICROLOG 94-00674 1 fiche

For many young individuals (aged 15-24), the transition from school to work means entering the labour force relatively unskilled, inexperienced, unfamiliar with job search and unaware of the job opportunities open to them. Despite the attention given to the unemployment rate and the level of public discussion, these discussions seldom treat the issues of unemployment in terms of its type and attendant causes. This paper attempts to do this as it relates to present day youth employment. CA CI LA SA
